Nº83: Neanderthals at the end of the world

ABSTRACT

The contribution of Andalusia to the study of Neanderthals is very significant, since Andalusia has some of the most important archaeological sites of Neandertahls. Therefore, next issue of the Andalucía en la Historia Magazine gathers the work of various researchers from different scientific disciplines- Archaeology, Paleontology, Geography, Linguistics, Ecology, etc. – as well as from different universities -Seville, Málaga, Córdoba, Granada, Complutense and CSIC – with the aim of updating what is currently known about Neandertahls: their anatomical characteristics, avatars, resilience and ability to adapt to the changes derived from the last great ice age, among other matters.
